Welcome to our international Short week

The University of Gävle, Sweden, is most pleased to welcome you to our short exchange week from March 7th at 14.00 until March 11th at 12.00, 2021. We are very much looking forward to fruitful discussions and exchange of experiences within the theme of this short exchange “Pre- and Primary School Culture In a New Context When Education Is Challenged By Immigrants”. In times of war not so far from our place on this earth, many refugees arrived to Sweden, many of whom children. Focus in this Short Exchange, is the work we are trying to fulfill, to include the newcomers in our schools – aligned with the “The Convention on the Rights of the Child” (1989), “The Salamanca Statement on special needs education” (1994) and our national curriculum. In ‘the European family’ we all have experienced, experience and will experience encounters as results of developments in other countries and nations.

As responsible for education and schooling, our task has become more complex due to this change. A question we, aligned with the Rights of the Child, The Salamanca Statement and the national curricula, is how the work during the Short Week can contribute to your professional work in the field studied. How can you adapt the knowing from our days focusing different questions and reflections. In the week we work with different topics according to the challenge, hopefully Covid-19 situation is better so we can include visit one multicultural school and visit Rapatac (organization that work with migrant children to support them after school activities and homework). How is it to work and support migrant children in the classroom. How it is to integrate to a new school context. In ‘the European family’ we all have experienced, experience and will experience encounters as results of developments in other countries and nations. As responsible for education and schooling, our task has become more complex due to this change. We also work from an ongoing project about migrants and parents (PARENTable).
